

Jon D'Eaux and the Sibling Rivals

Biography – March 2014

Jon D'Eaux is a dad from Guelph, Ontario, who likes to rock out. He was heavily involved in the Canadian music scene when he was younger. But it took having three kids in the house to help him rediscover the joy of making – and recording – original music.

In March 2014, Jon D'Eaux and the Sibling Rivals released its first 10-song LP, If It's Too Loud, You're Too Old. All of the songs are inspired by the musical ramblings of the kids. Jon has expanded their lyrics and melodies and arranged and recorded the songs so they sound like good music on the radio – it's music that is appropriate for families to enjoy together.

Jon firmly believes that kids aren't dumb, so music directed at them shouldn't be either. His live show includes a full-volume band comprised of the best dad musicians Guelph has to offer. Turn up the amp. Don the kids' ear protectors and let everyone dance until naptime.

The album If It's Too Loud, You're Too Old is available now around the world via iTunes, Amazon, and at www.jondeaux.com.
